But by far the most frequent and emphatic protests are directed against oppression, cruelty, and injustice to the poor and unprotected, the widows, orphans, and strangers.4 Let us try to understand the causes of the moral decline which these last charges indicate. There can be no doubt that the moral life of the nation had in the days of the great mono-Yahwists become polluted by a wholesale oppression of the poor and prostitution of justice in the interests of the rich such as was not known before. And this, again, reacted on the private life of the individual and brought about a still further deterioration of conduct in many other directions. It was not that the moral sense of the nation did not know these things to be wrong, but that certain changes in the economic condition of the country brought with it opportunities for self-indulgence...
