WordsWorth. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. Hardcover. 608 pages. Dimensions: 9.1in. x 5.8in. x 1.8in.Stone the Heir does not readily lend itself to characterization; for want of a better term I call it a comedy-of-exaggeration fantasy, but I quickly add it is a fantasy without magic swords and scantily-clad, big-busted women. It is written in an archaic language of my imagination. While strolling through the woods one Spring day, Z. Hud Twadder, a man of much learning from the local village, tripped over something protruding from the earth, flew through the air and squonched into a nearby brook. Dripping up the brook bank he yanked and pulled on the object of his travail, and quickly saw it was some old hides with markings on them. Rushing home with his treasures and using a piece of rare glass which makes words appear larger, he found he could translate what was on the ancient hides. So begins the story of a race of kindly giants, the Gentlefriends, and Stone the Heir. King Pistil charges His Son, Stone and His two Companions, Throw, a man of the world, and Autumn, a mouse of the fields, to visit the Nations, carrying no weapons and bearing a message of peace to all. After rigorous physical training from Lord Thundergut, a Lord of the Court, they begin their journey, running each day from early morn until the sun turns its corner in the west. Along the way, the Nations they visit include the Wees of the deep jungles, the Frabs of the stony mountain tops, the Anhydrous Pricklers of the burning deserts and the Hypogean Perfused Sudatorials under the sea. Their travels are filled with off-the- wall humor, adventures and misadventures, Rabelaisian uproars, biting satire and times of great tenderness. The 608pgs (197, 773 words) of the...
