It is about what I did, saw, felt, learned, loved, hated, and accomplished during my lifetime. As I review my life I think of now versus then, compared to what my parents said then, and what I believe now. I go back and forth in my lifetime in order to demonstrate or accentuate the internal feelings I had at the time or what I think about it now. I digress a few times because of what the issue or event helped me to recall. Sometimes I am very critical, even mean as I become angry now or recall my anger then about certain events, people or issues. No apologies for that. I call it Veni, Vidi because I came and I saw. There is no Vici because I conquered nothing. I state that it is more than a memoir because I found myself attempting to do some education and stating opinions more than once, because that is the way I am. I tell a few powerful stories regarding intensive care nursing. There is a lot on Catholicism and how I refuse it. I divulge my experiences with men - tune in. I describe my feelings while my brother was dying. I share my knowledge of and experiences in nursing, safety and accident prevention, ergonomics, and six sigma quality. I think about what I did and the incentives and influences I had to get me here. Where is here, anyhow? Well, it is being retired. It is being able to sit on my couch and write a book. I am so fortunate. In the last few days at work someone asked me if I...
